TERING HIS WIFE'S ROOM. And Then He Made Ills Better Ball's Visitor Sign Notes for $7,000 .-The Precious Pair in the Hands of the Police. The "Badgers" are not all dead yet, but they have found out that Washington is not exactly the town to work the old game in. Early in February the modern little house at No. 1223 Thirteenth street was rented by a gentleman and his wife and handsomely furnished by W. B. Moses & Son. As soon as oc-cupied a neat little sign in gilt letters, which read, "Dr. Condory, Specialist," was tacked up to the left of the

The new tenants seemed retired and made no effort to cultivate the acquaintance of their neighbors. The doctor appeared to have quite a number of patients, and the lady was seen to leave the house every afternoon about 1 o'clock and return again about 5. She is a woman of commanding and attractive appearance, dresses in good taste, and for a month or more her face has been frequently noticed and spoken about on the Avenue.

Everything went along smoothly un-til Monday night, when there was an in-terruption to the rule of domestic quiet. Yesterday afternoon Intelligence was conveyed to Detectives Carter and Raff conveyed to Detectives Carter and Raft to the effect that the "Badger game" had been played by Dr. Condory and bis wife upon a well-known attorney of Washington. It appears that a short time ago the attorney made the ac-quaintance of Mrs. Condory, and at her solicitation visited her house and was introduced to the doctor. The acquaintance ripened into friendship and the outcome was that the lawyer, the doctor and the Madame had several palatable lunches and spent several pleasant evenings together.

On Monday afternoon the lawyer received a little missive from Mrs.
Condory extending a cordial invitation to come up and spend the evening. It is unnecessary to say that the invitation was not declined.
Mrs. Condory's note was answered by the lawyer with an acceptance of the invitation. Through the kindness of the attorney himself THE CRITIC is enabled to tell the story of the evening in detail. He went to the house and was informed by the servant at the door that the Doctor was in Baltimore. Mrs. Condory, however, said they would dine together, and the table was laid in Madame's bedroom. The Doctor slipped in quietly, "Ach, Gott in Himmel" he vociferated as he entered the room. Then he picked up the attorney's clothes and said: "You come with me down stairs." The attorney

Once there the Doctor said: "I think I kill myself," producing a bottle of iodine. But he changed his mind and produced the two notes, already filled out for $1,000 and $2,000 at five days, and told the thoroughly uncomfortable attorney that he must sign them or be The attorney did so, and then the Doctor said to him, "Go up stairs and bid my wife good bye." While the attorney was doing this the Doctor locked the notes up in his desk, and when his caller came down again the two put on their hats and walked to the corner. "Good night," said the Doctor cheerily at the corner. "I will come to your office at I o'clock to-morrow for the money." The lawyer communicated with the police, and the next day at the hour the Doctor was to call he had a detective in the back room of his office. But the Doctor did not come. Instead he sent the follow-

Washington, March 4.

Dear Sir: I cannot come. Mrs. C—is very, very sick. I will wait you to 1 o'clock to-day and you come here in my house and we settle this thing at home. If you not be here at that time I will send the notes in the bank.
Yours, respectfully, Dr. Condony.

The attorney did not go. Yesterday the signer of the notes received notice from Mayse's bank that the $5,000 paper had been deposited these for collection; also a letter from the Danish Consul at Baltimore demanding the payment of the other one. In this way the scheme came out, and the lawyer was compelled to make public the circumstances as above given. Yesterday afternoon about 1 o'clock Detectives Raff and Carter visited the house and asked for the doctor. "He is not at home," was the servant's reply, "well the mistress will do," said Mr. Carter, as he pushed himself through the door and presented himself to the lady who stood in the hall. You will have to go to the police station with me." "What for? What for? she said, very indignantly. "Where's your warrant?"

With this the folding doors between the two rooms were slid open and a gentleman caller on the Do sor's wife wald: "You can't take her without a

'We will see about that. I will go to the box and ring for the patrol wagon, remarked Mr. Carter, "and take you both."

warrant.

This was enough, for they both, without hesitation, consented to go along.

At the headquarters the woman seemed to be very indignant at the way she had been treated, and sent for Campbell Carrington. The result was that she gave bonds for her appearance in court. She admits to having been caught by her husband in a compromising position, but denies that there was any effort at blackmail. On Tuesday Dr. Condory went to Baltimore, where he remained until yesterday afternoon, when he returned to Washington, but not to his house. He was in consultation with an attorney last night with a view to instituting proceedings for a divorce. A CRITIC reporter called at the Thirteenth-street house last evening just as Mrs. Con-dory was leaving. She seemed in a hurry and very much impatient and declined to talk in relation to the affair, beyond saving that there had been cause for the doctor's suspicion, and that he did return from Baltimore and find her in company with the lawyer as stated.

She made a little speech, in which she threatened to annihilate the whole police force of Washington.

Mrs. Condory appeared in the Police Court this morning and through her attorney asked for and was granted a continuance for one week. ontinuance for one week.

Mrs. Condory has obtained various sums from the attorney. Once he gave her $50. Dr. Condory is, as his sign says, a specialist. He is also in the insurance business. For an initiation fee of $10 and $1 a year he insures people from suffering from diseases.

UGLY CHARGES DENIED.

Circumstances Under Which a Chief Engineer Came to his Death,

A New York special to the Baltimore Sun says: The death in June last of Chief Engineer Hall, of the U.S. warship Nipsic, at Samoa, under what have been reported as suspicious elecumatances reflecting on the naval squadron in those waters, attracted the attention by reason of sensational accounts which got into the papers through John McCarty, an undertaker | medicine" for cures effected.

of Syracuse, N. Y., who was sent out by Engineer Hall's widow to recover Hall's body. He said Hall had been abandoned on the most desolate Island account of some disagreement with his commanding officer. He also claimed to have secured specific testimony of a very damaging character from the French priest at the place where Hall died, which he did not, however, divulge, but embodied in a complaint to Secretary Tracy.

Mr. McCarty further intimated in the interview held with him at the time of his return to the United States that Chief Engineer Burdette C. Gowing of the United States steamer Alert would be able to give some startling facts on be able to give some startling facts on his return home to Brooklyn in this frightful case of cruelty, as he termed it. Mr. Gowing has just returned to Brooklyn from his three years' cruise. He is a cousin of Engineer Hall on the maternal side and expressed great in-dignation at the charges fulminated by the undertaker against the naval squad-ron. He said that Hall's death was solely due to dysentery, in proof of which he exhibited a statement over the name of Edward H. Green, surgeon of the Alert, at Mare Island navy-yard. He denies all McCarty's charges.

YESTERDAY'S SECRET SESSION.

Swear They Didn't Do It, The Senate in executive session yesterday, which lasted four hours and thirty minutes, secretly considered the question of imprisoning the newspaper men who have published the secrets of executive sessions. The discussion turned on the constitutional phase of the question. Among the speakers were Senators Edmunds, Allison, Plumb, Faulkner and Dolph. A newspaper paragraph, which said of the Dolph investigating compiles.

vestigating committee, "To-day nothing will be done, because Senator Dolph. who is chief of the 'smellers,' is giving a Columbia River salmon lunch in the restaurant," was read by Senator Dolph.
This paragraph Mr. Dolph said was written by a man who enjoyed the privi-leges of the Press Gallery. He thought it was an outrage that a man who was granted special privileges by the Senate should be allowed to abuse one of its members in this way.

During the course of his talk to the Senate, Mr. Edmunds proposed that the old remedy be applied in this case—that all of the Senators and employes of the Senate take an oath of purgation to relieve them of all suspicion for what had been done in the section. what had been done in the past, and that the matter be closed.

Mr. Ingalls laid before the Senate a proposition that a committee be ap-pointed to confer with the press committee. He said that he thought the rules of the Press Gallery should pro-vide that any man admitted to its privileges, who should publish what purported to be a report of the pro-ceedings in executive session, should be expelled. Mr. Ingalls' proposition did not meet with much favor and both the Ingalls and Edmunds propositions were laid aside. The Senate then at 5:10 adjourned, with the understanding that the matter would be disposed of to-day.

TRANSFER OF THE WEATHER BUREAU. THE SIX O'CLOCK CLUB.

Discussing the Holding of the World's Fair in Chicago.

The Six o'Clock Club gave a dinner at Willard's Hotel last evening, at which covers were laid for seventy-five persons. The entire Illinois delegation was invited, but owing to the presence in the city of Chleago visitors, none were able to be present except Representative Adams.

The topic for discussion for this evening was "What it is fair to expect of Chicago in 1892." The subject was based upon the supposition that the World's Fair would be held in the Windy City, and the general tone of the discussion was as to what might be the existing state of affairs in Chicago at that time, and what was likely to be the result of holding the exposition

Um-uh. But some of the fellows did, and they ain't satisfied by a jug-

It occurred to THE CHITIC that here was a pretty how de do about something or other. A brief investigation un-earthed the following facts: Some little time ago the Centre Mar-ket was canvassed by a glib agent in the interest of a book called "Illustra ted Washington" and published in New York by the American Publishing and Engraving Company. At least that is the name on the title page. Yesterday was delivery day. So far as could be learned by Thic Crittic no one who had subscribed for the work was satisfied. In some cases there was a misunderstanding as to price, and in others it was claimed that the publishers had not carried out the agree ment entered into by the oily-tongued canvasser. Hence the display of indignation on the part of those who had ordered the books and the state of hi larious amusement on the part of those who had not bought any literature.

The book is paper-bound, with an illuminated cover, and contains a short sketch of Washington, interspersed with lithographs of public buildings, the rest of the volume being taken up with "write-ups" of various Washing ton businesses and enterprises. Th fortunate ones who were not in the dif ficulty stood around and laughed cold-bloodedly at those on whose shoulders the trouble had fallen and on whose stands the gaudily-covered books lay. They seemed to enjoy the muddle their fellow-marketmen had got into, much as we all laugh when a man slips up on a banana peel and gives the solid earth a good bump. It is funny to every-body except the man who slips. The Cartic interviewed a few of the investors in this peculiar product of the literary art and book-making trade with the following results: Andrew Loeffler, a pork butcher, said: "I ordered seventy-five copies at seventy-five cents per copy with the understand-the book was to have printed on the title ing that page 'Compliments to my customers,' steel engravings and a biographical sketch, and that no other pork butcher's name in the market should appear in the other biographical notices in my seventy-five books. book was to be my own souvenir to my customers. When the books were de-livered I at once saw that 'My com pliments' were not upon the title page as I was led to suppose, and that other wise the contract had not been carried

Mr. E. J. Adams of Adams & Co. was very indignant. The canvasser said to him that a prominent clothing firm had subscribed to 2,000 and J. R. Kelly, a butcher in the market, to 500 copies; that the book was to be cloth-bound with the finest steel engravings, with the compliments of each subscriber upon the title page, his advertisement and biographical sketch, and that in no other books outside of those contracted for by the subscriber would appear his (the subscribcr's) biographical notice, advertisement and cut. It would be the subscriber's book exclusively, for distribution to his customers. Upon these representations Mr. Adams subscribed to 200 copies. Cannon & Chandler, produce dealers in the market, 50 copies; Andrew Loeffler, 75 copies; J. R. Kelley, beef butcher, 500 copies; Walter Brown, beef butcher, 250 copies, and others.

The subscribers, however, declare that they are not responsible for the written contracts made with the can-vassers. They want to know who the American Engraving and Publishing Company of New York are and why the company has not carried out the contracts as made with their canvassers.

Mr. Moxley of Lee & Moxley, butchers, who had ordered 100 copies, said he thought they were to be seventy five cents per 100, and not seventy-five cents for each number. Other people in the market seemed to be under the same impression.

The chances are that the next advertising book canvasser who goes through Centre Market soliciting will be laid out on a chopping block and be sawed and chopped into little pieces. It's a safe place for the advertising solicitor to stay away from for the present.

"Peaceably if you can," but by all means keep Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup in the house, Neuralgia, rheumatism, lumbago and gout quickly cured with Salvation Oil. 25

The Persenger Department of the Pennsylvania Railroad announces that they will run two special trains to Baltimore tomorrow, the 5th, leaving Sixth street station at 12 o'clock noon and 5 p. m. Returning, leave Calvert station at 5:40 and 31:40 p. m. respectively. Round trip 11:40 p. m., respectively. Round trip tickets will be sold for these trains from Washington at rate of fifty cents.

Never Gave Her a Cross Word, In an Omaha church recently Sam Jones shouted: "Is there a man present who never spoke a cross word to his wife" The stience was becoming oppressive. People looked here and there. Every busband wanted to get up, but did not dare to.
